PROJECT PLAN:

Project Statement/Goal:

I want to create a website based around the Ace Attorney series, where anyone (whether they're a fan of the series or even a beginner) can arrive at and use to explore and discover everything there is to know about the franchise. While there are fan wiki pages out there, they are limited when it comes to material. For example, most of those pages do not have walkthroughs of the games or even scripts (dialogue). For my midterm project, I was able to create a site based on what I knew at the time but it inadvertently turned out like a site from the 90s. This time around, I want to make the site more contemporary while also including ever crucial component to the site.

Motivation:

I'm a huge fan of the Ace Attorney series and I've always wanted to create a mystery genre game just like the franchise. When we were told to create a website about anything, I couldn't think of any other franchise that I wanted to work with more than the Ace Attorney franchise. It was like killing two birds with one stone. I would be learning how to code properly whilst also learning more about the franchise that I love. Also, I desperately want to be able to properly transform my thoughts and ideas into a cool website.

Target Audience:

My target audience ranges from strangers to the franchise to hardcore fans such as myself. I want my website to be used by people who need help getting through a game to a person who wants to know everything there is to know about the franchise. Obviously, if you aren't a gamer or aren't interested in the visual novel genre, then my website might not be for you. Clearly, my target hasn't changed from that of my midterm project.

Competitive Analysis:

I'm going to base my website around another game-related site- Serenesforest.net. Serenesforest.net is a website that has amassed everything there is to know about the Fire Emblem franchise (and still going). I want my site to be just as thorough but if we're to look at websites related to the Ace Attorney franchise, a couple of sites come to mind. Aceattorney.wikia.com is also a website made by fans – for fans. It has in-depth information about characters and gives details about the games but it isn't complete. Like I've stated above, the site doesn't provide any means for a beginner to help himself complete the games (unless you count forums which are often too slow). There are plenty of fan-made, incomplete sites like Aceattorney.wikia.com but I want my site to be completed and thorough like serenesforest.net.

Content Inventory:

My site will have pictures, descriptions of the games, guides (or at least links to guides), trailers, news, and even links to purchase the games (through either Amazon or Nintendo).

Creative Brief:

I used a color scheme that was appropriate to each game, for my midterm project. In other words, I used important colors that signify something from the games. But that idea didn't work so well so this time around, I will be using a set color scheme that meshes well with each other.

Future Iterations:

I would like to implement a search bar in the future. If the site actually becomes popular, I would like to create forums or chat rooms in which fans of the franchise can interact.

Risks:

As before, lack of time (due to all the classes that I'm taking) is a big factor. Another factor is being able to process all the information that I learn and being able to use it properly. I will, without a doubt, have questions about things like the use of the javascript libraries we've been learning about.

SITEMAP:

As you can see, this site is completely different from my original vision. I've attempted to make the navigation as simple as possible. From the home page, there are 4 other places you can go. Users can either go straight to the section about the information about the games, they can skip straight to the walkthroughs and guides, or they can purchase the game through a third party site. The Forums section will be for the future so as of now, people won't be able to access it.

STYLE GUIDE:

The colors that I will be using will be limited to just 3 colors, unlike my previous iteration. These colors will be black (#000000), sandybrown (#F4A460), and lightgoldenrodyellow (#FAFAD2).

The font that I will be using will be the different from those of my previous iteration. In this iteration, I will be using one that was custom made- AceAttorney font.
